

Id, Ego, Superego: Examples

Learning Target: I will be able to define Freud's Model of the Psyche, including id, ego, & superego by identifying and creating examples of these 3 different types of motivation; I will be ready to apply this concept to Lord of the Flies by writing an essay that argues which three characters from the text can be considered archetypes of the id, ego, and superego characters.

Directions: Read the scenarios provided for you. Then, fill out the boxes with that you think the id would do, what the ego would do, and what the superego would do. For the last 3, create your own scenarios.

The Scenario	The Id Would...	The Ego Would...	The Superego Would...
On your way home from school, you see a big house in a nice neighborhood with the front door wide open. It doesn't look like anyone is home.
A student is walking out of the computer lab. When you enter, you see that a nice pair of sunglasses were left near one of the computers.
You forgot to do your homework. You look under your desk and find someone else's worksheet completed, but there is no name on it.
